It is also known as a genotyping test, which is the term used for the actual test and the comparative interpretation of the result. This test requires some DNA from the individual, since it needs a sample of DNA to generate the results. It can be done by cheek swabs or other bodily fluids. Before we can understand the genotype of an individual, we need to understand the genotype of the parents. If the parents are not tested and the DNA sample tested is from the children, it is essential to get the DNA sample of the mother and father from the child, so that the child's genotype and parent's genotype can be matched. The process of obtaining the samples can be cumbersome and it is quite expensive. Thus, it is important that the test provider collects the samples from the patients, the blood samples are collected by phlebotomists. DNA testing is the most accurate way to determine the relationship between two individuals. It is also important in paternity disputes as well as in criminal cases. The results are used to determine the child's genetic predisposition to certain health issues. Sometimes, a test can identify certain DNA conditions of the parents that will affect the chances of the child developing health issues. We are pioneers in DNA testing and the results are accurate and of high standards. We have years of experience in testing and can provide DNA testing for any kind of scenario you may have.
